Historic Pleasanton church ponders move

PLEASANTON — On June 15 the United Presbyterian Community Church congregation will decide whether or not to physically move the church and the social hall to the church's 3.4 acres of property on Mirador Drive where the pre-school building and the newly built amphitheater are located.

At this year's annual meeting of the Building Committee, the congregation requested the committee to seriously consider the possibility of moving the buildings once it was clearly evident the $750,000 needed to construct a new building could not or possibly would not be raised.

Today, the first information and discussion meeting will be held at 10:15 a.m. and again at 11:45 a.m. in the Sanctuary. Another such meeting will be held on Children's Day, June 8, before the picnic planned for that Sunday. These two meetings will serve as information and discussion only. No voting will take place.

On June 15, the congregation will gather at the new amphitheater on Mirador Drive for service of worship, the first activity to be held in the facility. Following this service, the recommendations of the Building Committee will be put upon the floor and normal time allotted for discussion. When the congregation is ready, the vote will be called for, unless, there is a motion to table the decision to proceed to develop final plans to move the Sanctuary and Social Hall. According to Reverend Robert Vogt, pastor of the church, if less than 100 members show up for the meeting, a delay of voting may also be made. This is due to the fact that Vogt wants a majority of the members expressing their desires and with vacations now in progress, some members may be unable to attend this meeting.

If the congregation votes to relocate the over 100 years old church and the social hall, another meeting will be held in the fall after plans have been more fully developed in detail with complete costs. At this time, it also will be determined how the financial obligation will be met through pledges from the members and how much will be agreed upon to borrow from the bank on either short or long term financing.

The concern for more space for membership came to the congregation's annual meeting years ago. At that time, a Building Planning Committee was formed. Such a committee, by the church's constitution, must represent the pros and cons of an issue so a balanced viewpoint can be presented to the members. Reports from the committee have been made repeatedly to the congregation over the past few years.

The last proposal was a total development, including a new Sanctuary that would cost three quarters of a million dollars. The congregation voted to proceed with a plan to raise the money, however, the economic response was minimal. This led to the request from the congregation to seriously study the possibility of moving the buildings.

Following a study, the building committee arrived at a total figure of approximately $105,000 which includes: Pacific Telephone and P.G. and E. expense to raise or cut wires above the site along the route to the Mirador site; moving the Sanctuary and the social hall; construct full basement for both the Sanctuary and social hall; create a perimeter road 12 feet wide around the entire lot, plus parking.

A detailed report on the above information will be presented at the meetings plus the possible values of selling the Neal Street property. The committee also will be prepared to discuss increased sanctuary space alternatives such as attachments or expansions.

At the 15th of June meeting, if the congregation votes to "move," an in-depth, detailed study will be conducted throughout the summer. "There is always the possibility, after this complex study," said Rev. Vogt, "that we could find this move not to be feasible. Right now we have been advised the move is possible. If a study shows that considerable damage or extensive changes would have to be made, we will then again reconsider what would be the best solution."

If the congregation decides to borrow money to finance the moving of the building, the total plan must be presented to the San Francisco Presbytery. This is necessary as the Presbyterian Community Church is a "connectional" church, that is, they are tied to the United Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. As such, the church must refer certain matter to the Presbytery of San Francisco. This is also necessary because all indebtedness of a local church becomes the responsibility of the whole church. This is beneficial to a local church in that better interest rates can be obtained through the good security of the whole church.

If a decision is made to have a fund drive instead of borrowing money, approval by the Presbytery will not be necessary. Approval to raise money for the church is not necessary.

Upon approval by the Presbytery on borrowing money, if that is the way the congregation votes to go, the project can then proceed.

The feelings of several members of the church who were contacted indicated they were in favor of moving the building, provided damage to the church could be avoided.

Reverend Vogt, after much contemplation, consideration and meditation, feels it would be a good move for the congregation. "Right now we are split," he said. "We have children on Mirador drive and services are held at Neal. This does present some family inconveniences."

"The possibility of placing the Sanctuary on the East end of the property, surrounded by a green glen, the feeling of the 'little white church in the wildwood' has captured my imagination." He further stated, "we gain consolidated site, space and a beautiful setting and view of the Valley all at a price that is astoundingly low. If we vote to borrow money on a short term base (to cover the payout of the three year pledges) we can do it and be debt free in a few short years."

Sam Roberson agrees with Rev. Vogt's thoughts, however, both encourage members to "speak their own minds," disagree with the committee and/or the two of them.

"What better way to begin our next 100 years... another Century for Christ. We can be a 'light on a hill' into the second century," states the Reverend in summing up his feelings.

County staff accord near

Alameda County Bureau

A basic settlement between Alameda County and its unhappy workers was reached after lengthy negotiations Friday, pending ratification by the union membership.

Details of the settlement were unavailable through either the county or the unions. However, it was known that the issue preventing an earlier settlement was money.

The unions wanted a 12 per cent raise for workers with salaries under $1,000 a month and 10 per cent for workers with salaries greater than $1,000 a month. The county had responded by offering 8 per cent and 6 per cent, respectively, and had reportedly upped that offer by 2 per cent during the past week.

Joining forces

Parents and teachers in the Murray Elementary School District picket district offices in protest over the slow pace of negotiations between the two groups. The teachers have set a deadline of Tuesday for settlement of the issues, but both sides feel such a settlement is unlikely. The teachers will make a presentation to the board at Monday night's meeting at Nielsen School and will follow that with a mass meeting the next afternoon.

Recreation brochures

PLEASANTON — Brochures listing summer recreation programs will be ready for the public on Thursday, not on Monday, as originally scheduled.

After Thursday, the brochures may be picked up at the recreation office in the Civic Center, the Pleasanton Library, Aquatic Center and the Chamber of Commerce.

Registration for the summer sessions will begin June 9.

Lawyers seek safe area with clients

Members of the Livermore-Amador Bar Association contend they should not be subject to arrest for any past indiscretions of their own, whilst they are visiting a client at the Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center.

The problem came to light in the May edition of LIV-AM FLIM-FLAM, the valley bar association's newsletter. Pointing out that the Symbionese Liberation Army has "safe houses throughout our peaceful suburbs," the newsletter goes on to complain that "those of us who have outstanding traffic warrants ought to have a square foot of 'safe area' within the barbed wire fences of Santa Rita."

The newsletter notes that an attorney entering Santa Rita "to pick up a friend or client" must "turn in your driver's license before the desk man will tell you whether your friend has checked out or is still in custody."

But that driver's license number automatically goes into the computer, which automatically reveals whether any warrants—even neglected traffic citations—are outstanding. "Then it's tough. Post bail or your body gets held," FLIM-FLAM laments.

That's why the law men want a "safe area" when they visit Santa Rita. There was no suggestion of sharing that sanctuary with others who might visit the county jail, only to find themselves being "detained unexpectedly" for some past transgression.

FBI probes theft of 30,000 jeans

PLEASANTON — Those 30,000 pairs of liberated Levi's are still on the loose, according to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

They were taken Tuesday in a truck from a Santa Clara lot, and the truck—bare as Mother Hubbard's cupboard—found Wednesday at Pleasanton's Commerce Circle near Johnson Industrial Boulevard.

A man who identified himself as "Doug Breuner," called the Associated Press and said "We have liberated several tons of Levis and are holding them hostage against the Haas family because of their crimes against the Jewish People."

The Haases, owners of the Levi Strauss firm and long active in the Jewish Welfare Federation, filed a complaint against six members of the militant Jewish Defense League who allegedly invaded their offices Apr. 4 criticizing the charity organization for giving funds to non-Jewish groups.

"Breuner" demanded the charges be dropped and that proceeds of a $22 million fundraising drive for the federation headed by Levi Strauss President Peter Haas be given to Jews.

As of Friday, however, the FBI still was not convinced of the political overtones of the case.

While they "can't overlook anything," FBI inspector Frank Perrone said, they are working with the Transcon trucking firm and treating the case "as any other interstate theft."

Breuner, claiming to be a member of the "Jews for a Democratic Welfare Federation," has not been located. The truck, minus its $450,000 retail-value jeans, was found in Pleasanton by an as yet unidentified employee of Transcon.

It had arrived at a San Jose distribution center with a shipment from the firm's Mississippi and Georgia plants.

Murray trustees, teachers gird for new pact showdown

A tumultuous crowd of teachers is expected to live on Monday night's Murray Elementary School District Board of Trustees meeting at Nielsen School in Dublin.

The teachers and the district are embroiled in their perennial squabble over salary and fringe benefits, with the district claiming it doesn't have the money to meet teacher demands and the teachers saying that it does.

Unless settlement is reached at a Monday afternoon meet-and-confer session—which both sides concede is unlikely—the teachers will take their case directly to the board Monday night and from there to a mass meeting Tuesday afternoon.

One item on the agenda that is sure to rouse teacher ire is the proposed adoption of the calendar for 1975-76. The district and teachers are five days apart on the length of the school year, with MESD asking for 177 teaching days and five teacher work days for a total of 182, while the Certified Employees' Council had at one point bent to agree to 175 teaching days and two teacher work days.

District officials have been threatening to adopt the calendar unilaterally at this meeting and indeed it is the tenth item on the agenda.

There will be some good news, at least, for board members, as it appears that construction on the new intermediate school in Dublin could begin by the end of June. Delays in the school have pushed back its estimated occupancy one year to the winter of 1977.

Three reports dot the agenda.

"The (Murray Elementary School District) board has absolute contempt for the community it supposedly serves," said Don Legee, president of the Murray Teachers' Association (MTA) in a press release Friday.

Legee's blast came in preparation for Monday night's school board meeting at Nielsen School, when a large delegation of teachers and parents are expected to ask pointed questions.

In the past (and most notably at the May 19 meeting), the board has responded to almost all questions by saying that the answers fall under meet-and-confer items. It is a board policy that meet-and-confer items should not be discussed at a public meeting.

Legee also stated in his press release that "Our elected officials are supposed to be accountable to the people who put them in office and this community wants good teachers and adequate instructional materials for their children."

Instead, Legee charged, the board has disregarded human needs by giving priority to items such as blacktopping a parking lot over classroom materials for students.

Most of the questions raised by the teachers will be blunted as the board has a policy that meet-and-confer matters—items under negotiation—are not to be discussed at public meetings.

However, that has not daunted incipient teacher demagogues in the past and similar speeches are expected Monday night.

County unit adds interchange

HAYWARD — PleasantonCity officials were successful Friday afternoon in persuading the Alameda County Transportation Advisory Committee to add the West Las Positas interchange to the list of projects that will be considered by the State Highway Commission July 17.

City Manager Bill Edgar, Councilwoman Joyce LeClaire and Director of Housing and Community Development John Bowling made the city presentation to the advisory committee Friday.

No funding is recommended for the multi-million dollar interchange but, if the project is accepted by the State Highway Commission in July, it will allow engineers to begin survey plans and right-of-way acquisition for the interchange.

It will also allow the city to begin discussions with the state regarding the future planning and design of the project with the possible early construction of a pedestrian overpass.

The State Highway Commission will meet July 17 in the BART Headquarters Building in Oakland.

Interstate 680 crash

A dog, perhaps driven to distraction by the heat, wandered onto Interstate 680 Friday and inadvertently caused this two vehicle collision and ensuing fire. Alvin Ferreria's meat truck rammed into Eugene Shipley's Ford Torino after shipley stopped to avoid the dog, and Shipley's gas tank erupted into flames. The very hot fire gutted the interior of the Ford and threatened to explode the gas tanks in Ferreria's truck. Luckily, the Pleasanton Fire Department and the California Division of Forestry managed to put out the fire before that happened. Oh, and the dog was only slightly injured.

Valley construction vet to retire after 31 years

He calls his operation a "fix-it shop on a big scale" — and refers to himself as the meanest man in the Valley. When you talk with John

Deetz face-to-face, both claims appear true. Deetz has owned and operated Deetz Construction Co., Inc. for the past 31 years at 4227 Pleasanton Ave. in Pleasanton, offering general engineering work of all types and sizes imaginable. He turned 70 on May 17, and has decided to retire.

Deetz ran away from home at 14 to work in a mill before being dragged home by his parents to finish the eighth grade, "because that's the way people were in those days," he said.

In 1924 he began working for Henry Kaiser and by 1929 was making top scale as a crane operator — 90 cents an hour. "There were no unions then, it was just whatever he decided to pay and he was a fair man," said Deetz.

When Kaiser asked him to go to Cuba to supervise construction of a $15 million highway, Deetz balked. "I had just gotten married, and two men had already died of malaria over there. I didn't want to go." He was fired two weeks later.

Deetz ran a gravel plant for another company for five years before the depression halted construction generally, and again, he was out of work.

So he brought an old truck and a scoop shovel and loaded gravel, selling it for 50 cents a yard including free delivery within a ten mile radius.

He built two gravel plants, in Houston, California in 1935, and one in Medera in 1937. Business went well until World War II and general construction stopped.

He was awarded a contract to supply materials for a portable cement plant in Concord. He found gravel in Del Valle Creek and began scooping it out.

Deetz decided to build a gravel plant on that site, so he bought the seven acres on which is now situated for $3,000 an acre. It is now assessed for $27,000 an acre.

There were 1,300 people in Pleasanton then when he supplied materials for Harris Acres, small homes above Second St. near Abbie. They sold for $4,000 before WWII.

Deetz Construction Co. now boasts 82 pieces of equipment, 12 men, $42,000 worth of precision tools, a heavy duty service shop, and offers 19 different services.

"We take the little jobs Kaiser doesn't want. They couldn't even afford to send a man out on most of them," said Deetz.

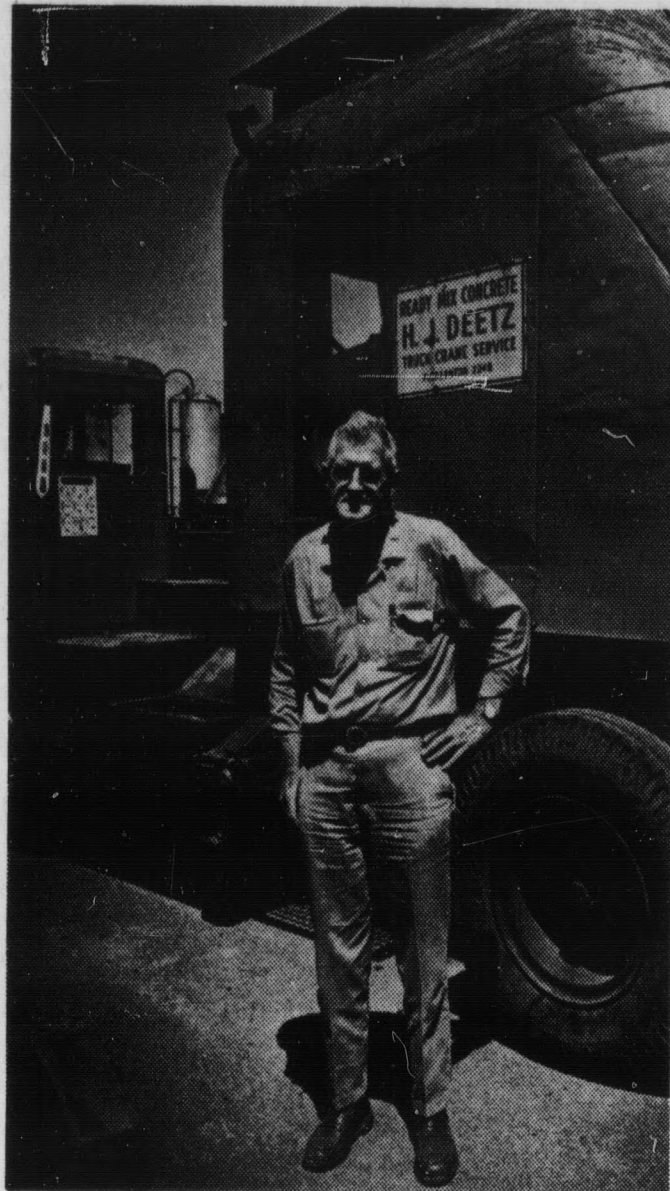

He prides himself on his knowledge of mechanics and enjoys the active role he takes in planning, bidding, and supervising.

"I am a good mechanic and won't take a snow job from anybody," Deetz said.

"I am a perfectionist. We have a reputation for doing good work. I like doing good work. If some guy tells me that he just wants a cheap job, I tell him to get somebody else," he said.

Deetz glances down from the two-story house overlooking his construction yard, and reflects with pride the three decades of accomplishment in Valley progress.

The world can be fed — deliciously

During the days when many ethnic groups were busier trying to fit into American mainstream culture than assert their own identities, a wise man remarked, "The last thing about you to quit being whatever you are is your stomach."

Third generation Italian-Americans still eat spaghetti. Black people cling to soul food, and Jews twitch for matzo-ball soup.

But Americans in general have a special problem: They actually become nervous when their weekly steak is threatened. If meat isn't on the menu, they say there's nothing to eat.

As part of a massive attempt to change the eating patterns of this nation to include meatless meals the United States Committee for UNICEF (The United Nations Children's Fund) has dispatched Nick Robertson, to re-educate the American palate in this area. He does it by cooking delicious, multi-course meals of international dishes for crowds from 50 to 400.

Robertson will do the same in Dublin, Wednesday night, June 4 at Murray School. The dinner, which will raise funds for UNICEF, is sponsored by the

Dublin Junior Women's Club. (See accompanying boxed article for the details.)

After a dinner that might include East Indian curry, and an Indonesian vegetable salad with peanut sauce, the most devout meat-eater is often pleased to admit he could easily do without meat for a couple of days a week!

People in developing countries eat largely meatless meals, Robertson explains, getting their full protein requirement from a combination of grains and legumes. This sort of mixture is also popular in countries such as Italy, where Pasta e Raggiolo (the famous Pasta Fazzooli) is based on macaroni plus beans.

It makes sense for Americans to do more of that type of cooking, Robertson added, in light of present-day prices and — just as importantly — in light of the problem of world hunger.

Robertson, along with many other experts, believes that if the world's resources were properly used, the world could be fed.

"Animals take an awful lot of grain to be fed," he points out. "An American eats almost one ton of grain per year. But only about 200 pounds of this is consumed directly.

"The other 1800 pounds is ingested in the form of meat fed on grain."

He contrasted this with an adequate diet in developing countries of about 400 pounds of grain per person per year. Almost all of this is consumed directly as porridge, gruel or rice.

A typical meal eaten in some famine-ridden village rightly dismays some people, Robertson admits, and he is concerned some people will stay away from his dinners because of that frightening prospect.

But he is not talking about subsistence level diets, Robertson insists. He is interested in demonstrating how delicious meatless food can be.

"We're not going to serve a bowl of rice with a lecture," he says. "We're trying to get people to conceive of a whole new way of eating, a whole new cuisine along with showing them how to save money and lives."

"Cooking meatless meals is harder, since there's nothing you can just throw together and just stick in the oven for half an hour," Robertson admits. However, many dishes can be prepared and then drawn out throughout the week.

He regularly puts in about a day and a half preparing for one of his public dinners, and obviously enjoys it. (His wife Rosanna, also a UNICEF worker, sometimes helps out.) His cooking job would be considered a nightmare by many chefs who can't cook in anyone else's kitchen any more than they can get a good night's sleep in a strange bed.

But Robertson not only goes into other kitchens, where the equipment might or might not be the finest, but also shops in local supermarkets to prove that special ingredients are not necessary for his meatless cuisine.

"I don't even use cheese," he says, nor does he use milk unless he is making coconut milk for an exotic casserole.

"Milk and packaged coconut are easier to get than real coconut milk, and my object is to show that you don't have to live near a high-priced specialty market to cook this way."

Foreign-accented meatless dishes, such as Robertson cooks, depend heavily on spices for flavor. But artful blending prevents anyone's rushing from the table in a frantic search for a glass of water.

His recipes can be obtained, free, by writing to the United States Committee for UNICEF, 456 E. Colorado Blvd., Pasadena, Calif. 91101. After Wednesday evening's dinner, Robertson will lead a discussion and show slides on the topic "A Hungry World — Can It Be Fed?"

Dublin Juniors

Prospective members of the Dublin Junior Women's Club will be feted at a spring luncheon Monday, June 2 at 191 Madora Place in San Ramon.

Club members will explain the objectives and activities of the club, and answer any questions.

Women between the ages of 18 and 35 interested in community service are invited to contact Joy Milliken at 828-7380 for more information.

CAN AMERICANS SURVIVE without their meat-eating habits? Can the world survive with them.

Among the Grammar School originals...

Two generations of students and a teacher who can also recall the Pleasanton Grammar School are captured in this head table setting at the Thursday reunion for that colorful group.

Raymond Bianchi (left) entered Pleasanton Grammar School in 1915, which would be 17 years after his mother, Mary Delucchi Spetti (seated next to him) was enrolled. Prena Raboli Koopman entered first grade in 1898.

Martha Schmidt Studebaker started one year later. Alfred Casterson is another "pupil" from that era who shared the head table with Bertha Jessen Casterson, a fourth grade teacher at the old two-story school from 1913 through 1915. See today's "Round the Town" column on the editorial page for some further comments on that reunion.

May School

Nine hundred dollars worth of first grade shingles are being put into place on the May School roof, the money raised and donated by the Livermore Heritage Guild. Restoration of the historical landmark is endorsed as an official Livermore Bicentennial project. For work session information contact Dorothy Nielsen at 447-6187.

Breadboard CHS lunch

A Breadboard Luncheon will be served during the neighborhood boutique slated June 3 and 4 in Dublin by members of the Charlie Brown Chapter of Children's Home Society, and the Roadrunner Unit of the Mt Diablo Rehabilitation Center.

The luncheon at Shannon Community Center features cold avocado soup, the Breadboard's spring salad, nut bread, and a choice of coffee or tea for $2.75 per person. Other beverages will be available at 50 cents a glass.

General chairwomen for the event are Mrs. Gerald Brown and Mrs. Robert Sheridan. Care and feeding of swimming pools

The general manager of one pool company estimated that a pool in the summer will require three to four times the amount of attention it will in the winter. A pool gets a greater workout during the hot months and algae creates more havoc.

Proper treatment of the pool with chlorine will inhibit algae buildup. But algae grows fast when the water temperature gets above 80 degrees. Chlorine also dissipates rapidly when the water is warm. Therefore, it is a good idea to superchlorinate the pool during extremely hot weather. Add two to three times the normal dosage of chlorine once a week. Test kits also are handy in determining the proper chemical balance in a pool. However, if algae becomes a major problem, the pool should be drained and washed with acid.

To prevent the water from becoming like hot soup during the summer months, some Arizonans attach one or more aerators to their pool. Using these at night will cool the temperature so it will be cool and pleasant the next day.

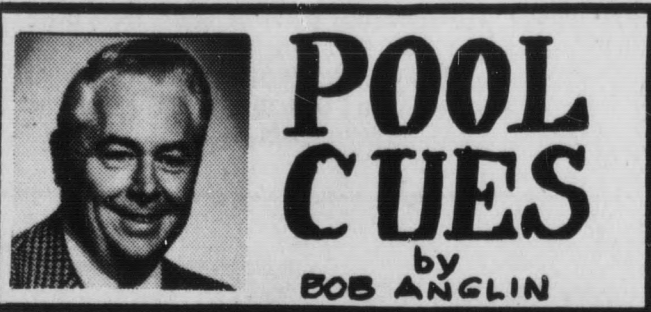

After a dust storm there are various alternatives for cleaning a pool, depending on the equipment available. If the dust storm is excessive, the pool may have to be vacuumed out or referred to a pool cleaner over a course of about three days. If a pool gets caught in a flood, it is best to have the water completely drained and refilled with fresh.

Pool servicing also is available. The average company will charge approximately $35 a month (not including chemicals) for keeping a pool operating properly, if for some reason the owner isn't able to (if he is on a vacation or ill, or for any other reason).

Rich Davis, a pool builder, said that a pool owner should count on spending approximately a dollar a day for chemicals, water and electricity.

POOL CUES

by BOB ANGLIN

The calendar says it's spring with the best swimming weather coming up, and for the home owner who had decided this is the year to buy a pool, a little knowledge about the subject is a valuable thing.

A swimming pool is a long range investment which may be expected to increase the value of family real estate as well as provide a permanent center for back yard holidays, fun, and healthful exercise.

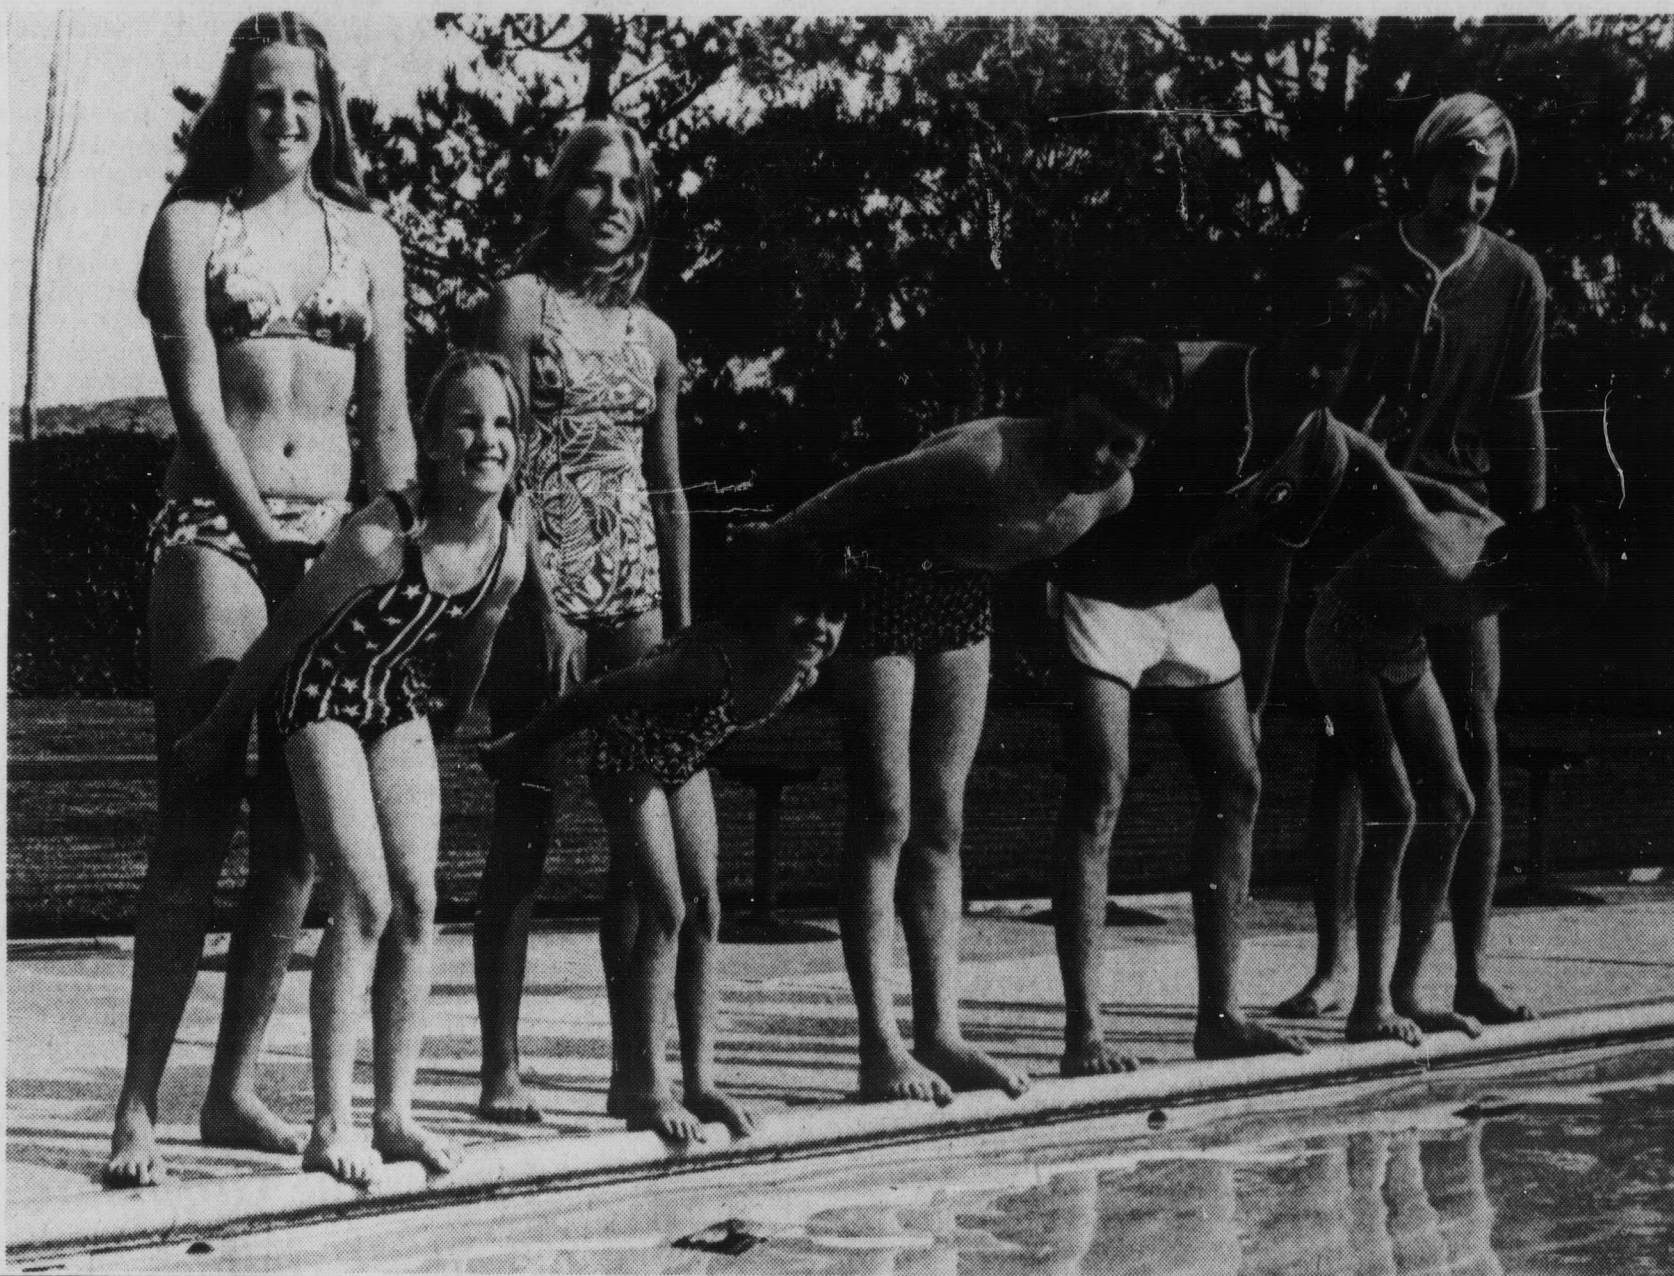

Bob Anglin, Vice President, Sales, of Continental pools, says there are a few basic guidelines to help direct the buyer to full value for his money, sound craftsmanship and quality construction.

Because a pool is permanent and not intended for trade-in, it shouldn't be purchased on impulse as many people buy a car.

"Plan before you take the plunge," advises Anglin. Planning includes a survey of the lay of the land in the back yard, sun exposure and shade patterns, view from the house, prevailing winds, fencing, patio size and pool shape.

In general, a pool should conform to the contour of the yard, although there are no hard and fast rules, and many pools are shaped according to the owner's whim.

Most of the planning can be done by the pool builder — and the most important part of the planning is the selection of a responsible pool builder.

Light it up

Swimming at night is a good way to relax and unwind. Treading cool, clean water on a hot, windless night is a pleasure almost everyone can appreciate. And swimming pool lights provide a certain aesthetic touch, in addition to being a safety measure.

While many pool owners prefer lights with clear 100-watt lenses with 500-watt bulbs, more and more people are equipping their pools with colored lenses ranging from amber to red to blue. According to one pool builder, blue is especially popular.

Some owners like to mix their lenses. They may have a clear lens illuminating the shallow end of the pool and a red or blue lens adding color to the main pool area. Or they might have the entire pool flooded with clear lenses and use red lenses to accentuate a spa or fountain area.

A swimming pool bulb is easy to change. All pools are bonded to prevent electrical shock. Usually an owner will have to do no more than shut off the light, loosen a screw and the entire light assembly will float to the top where the bulb can be changed on the deck.

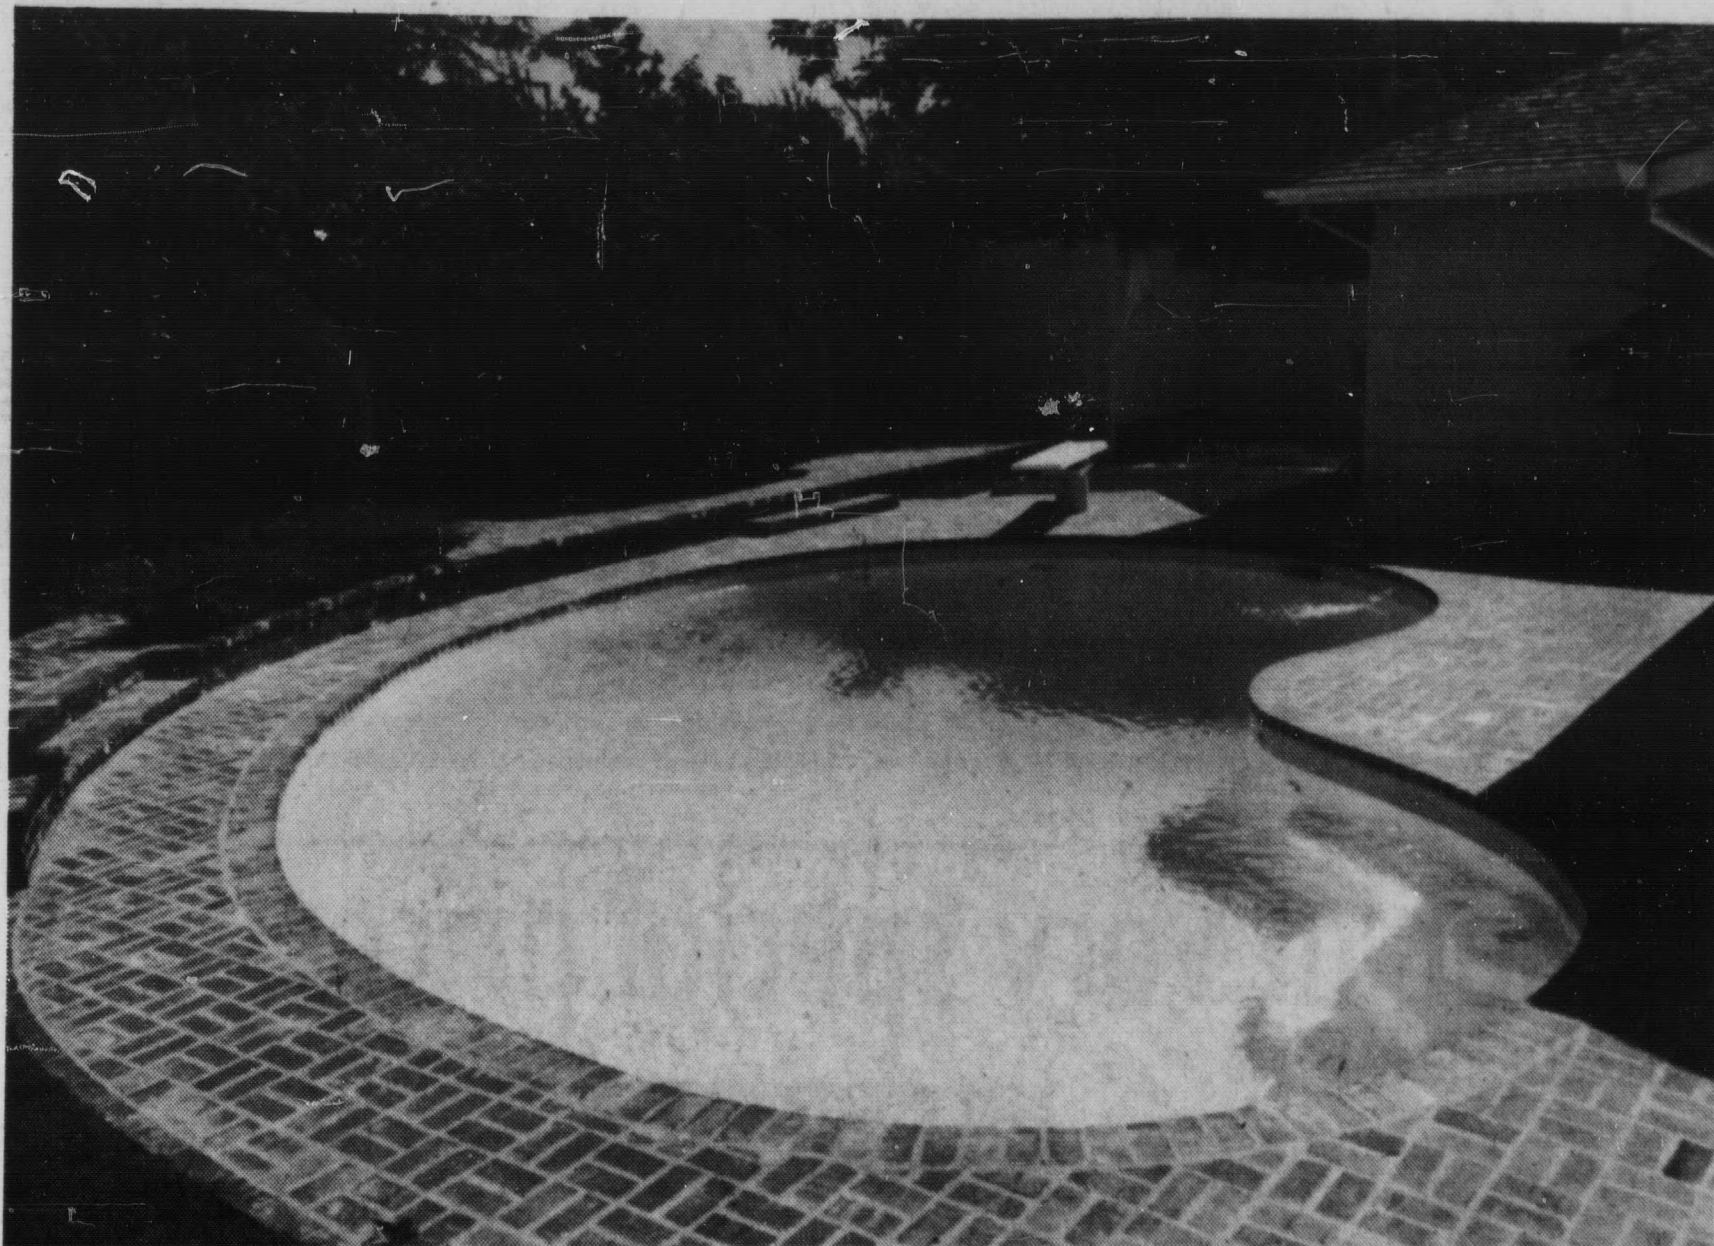

And in case you have trouble with pesky insects hitting the pool at night, most pool owners suggest replacing clear lenses with blue. Blue light doesn't attract bugs, only the neighbors.

Robots do work

Before automation, a pool owner had to spend many hours cleaning, brushing and vacuuming his pool. Today most of the time consuming labor of maintaining a pool can be done for him by various pool robots now on the market.

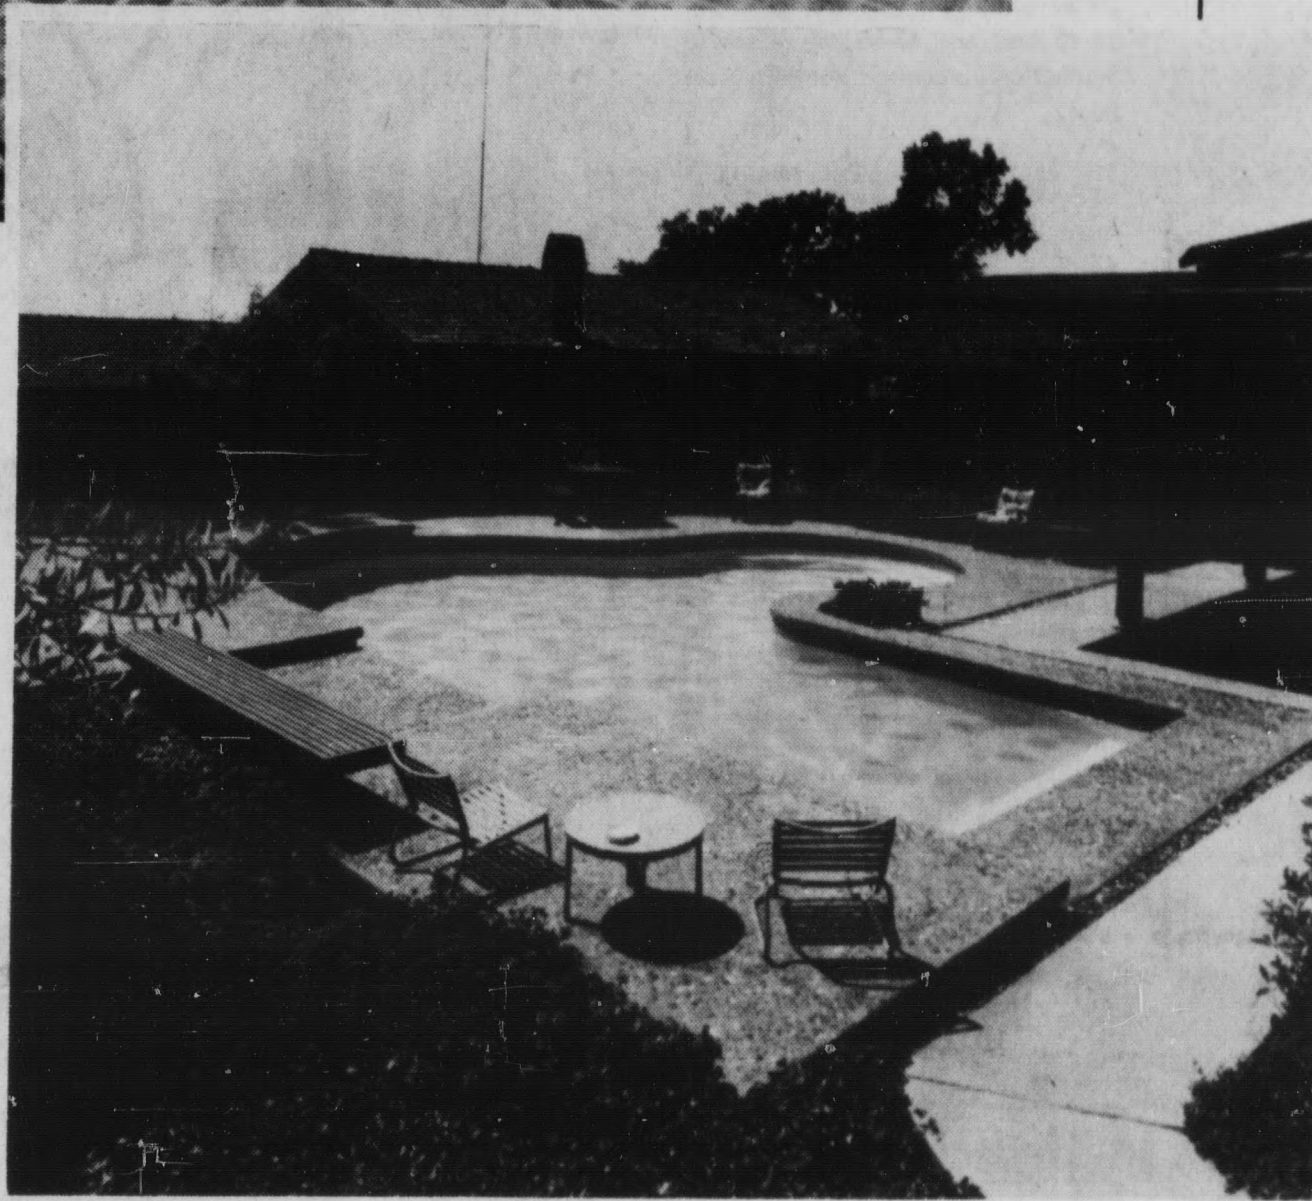

The leading automatic pool cleaning system is the surface variety that travels around the perimeter of the pool with hoses that keep dirt and bugs and other refuse in suspension so it can all be pulled through a skimmer and a cleaning system which purifies the water. But there are alternate systems that can be imbedded in the pool itself.

Another pool robot is an automatic water leveler. It operates similarly to the automatic float in a toilet bowl. When the leveler fills a pool with a certain amount of water the float rises and shuts the water off.

There also is an automatic chlorinator which dispenses chlorine into the pool. One variety puts out chlorine through holes which can be enlarged to allow more chlorine in the pool when necessary. Another kind of chlorinator manufactures its own chlorine.

Some pools now have an automatic alarm system that fits over the side of the pool and if you are in the house and someone falls into the pool it will activate immediately and produce a warning sound.

One pool builder said, "The inroads and improvements we have made in twenty-five years have been so fantastic that the present owner practically has a self-cleaning pool. This was all unheard of fifteen or twenty years ago."

Wide open spaces

An exposed aggregate patio and two long arms give a feeling of folks are in the wide open spaces when they swim or lounge beside this backyard pool.

Summer nursery school offers park tours, ice cream making

Devoted to educating parents to bring up their children more effectively, as well as developing the child's social awareness, Hill 'n Dale Nursery School is presently inviting registrations for its summer program.

A wealth of experiences, from visiting Sunol Regional Park to making ice cream, awaits youngsters between the ages of 2½ and 6. The school is located in rented quarters at Camp Parks and operated by the adult education section of the Amador Valley Joint School District.

Linda Ward, who will head up the summer program, says the nursery school is designed to help mothers learn the characteristics of their children when placed in social-play situations. She believes the nursery, with its prerequisite parent participation and broad scope of play experiences, lends itself to positive development of the child during the crucial pre-school and kindergarten years.

When parents sign their children up for a session, they are committed to spending one day a week at the school as a teacher. While the latter

Some "foul and calumnious knave," a dsterdly despoiler of the environment, lifted it—not gingerly — from its Pine and Rincon prominence where it proudly guarded, for 11 years, the brave men who man station number two.

The 36-inch barrel, weighing some 300 pounds, was stolen May 10, City Manager Bill Parness told the shocked city council Tuesday night. It was pried from its cradle rigging, not necessarily by Godzilla, While the school operates year-round, under the direction of Corinne Warren, Mrs. Ward, who is working toward a masters in early childhood education, is organizing the summer course.

The session lasts from 10 to 12:30 p.m. from June 30 to Aug. 1. Tuition for a five-week course is $20. Children must bring their own lunches and, though staff members are proficient in Red Cross safety procedures, Mrs. Ward notes additionally the presence of the Camp Parks Fire Dept. a block away.

During the regular nursery school year, September to May, children attend Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 to 12:30. Thus, the parent is actually putting in one morning a week beside the tuition payment.

For more information on registering for the summer nursery school (registrations are being accepted now), parents should call Mrs. Ward at 846-9622.

Dumped napalm substance in CC spawns fear

By John VanLandingham
Leshner News Bureau

ANTIOCH — Some 20,000 pounds of a substance used to make napalm bombs was bulldozed into the Pittsburg dump this week, touching off a minor furor before it was declared harmless.

Antioch Fire and Regional Water Quality Control board officials as well as a spokesman for the Concord Naval Weapons station all said the substance, an aluminum soap used as a jelling agent, was inert.

Fire Marshal Keith Hayden said that although the material is flammable, it is no more hazardous than normal trash. But for a brief period Thursday, a number of state and county officials thought they might be sitting on a bomb.

Their fear was that the substance, although not listed on the state's hazardous waste materials list, could combine with any petroleum product and ignite.

The incident was anonymously reported to Jim Pucci of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, who said 200 barrels of the powder were dumped at the Pittsburg dump some time Tuesday.

Each barrel contained 100 pounds of the powder, and most of it was covered in the usual sanitary landfill fashion.

A report at the sheriff's office quotes the dump's operator, Lou Mascheroni, as saying he had twice previously refused to permit the material to be dumped. He said the material was finally dumped on a day he was absent.

The report named a B.R. Holt as the person who dumped the material and Darrell Nelson, a senior inspector for the smog district, said Holt was affiliated with the Concord firm of KTK CO., 3001 Clayton Rd.

However, no such firm could be located, nor could Holt.

Nelson said the firm bought 55,600 pounds of the inert powder from the weapons station last June.

Weapons station spokesman Albert Compaglia said the material was sold, although he didn't know to whom, because it was so old it wouldn't even make the jelly anymore.

Compaglia said the material was turned over to the disposal section which advertised it for sale.

He admitted he couldn't understand why anyone bought the material since it was like buying 200 barrels of sand.

Nelson and Steve Macaulay of the Central Valley Regional Water Quality Control Board said the material was traced back to its manufacturer, Dow Chemical Co. in Michigan, who assured them the material was material was completely inert.

Fire marshal Hayden said this was confirmed by Navy ordinance officials in Crane, Ind. He added that the material was not produced at the Pittsburg Dow Chemical plant.

Macaulay called a conference of Antioch fire officials, county and state health representatives, smog district inspectors and the dump's operators Thursday to investigate the incident.

Fear of a dump fire, such as those which have plagued Antioch and Pittsburg officials in the past and led to the ban on dumping certain materials locally, was one of the major concerns.

Too there were fears of possible health hazards to dump employees, explained Ted Gerow of the county's environmental health department.

He explained there exists a fragmented jurisdiction over waste disposal.

On one hand there is the state health department with jurisdiction over the hauling and disposal of hazardous wastes. Then there is the State Water Resources Control board which has jurisdiction over liquid or waste haulers and classifies dump categories.

Wolves send seven to State track

A dancing, hugging, howling, "We did it!" celebration climaxed a day of ecstasy for San Ramon athletes yesterday, as the Wolves qualified seven competitors for this week's State Track and Field Championships.

The revelry took place at the finish of the mile relay, the final event of the North Coast Section meet at Diablo Valley College in Pleasant Hill.

As if to unplug weeks of pent-up, self-induced pressure, San Ramon's mile relay combination of Fritz Venker, Paul Swenson, Tim O'Donnell and Matt Prieue put together a 3:23.7 school record, placing third behind Harry Ellis (3:20.5) and Vallejo (3:23.7). Those four will join two miler Roy Kissin (an easy winner in 9:16.5) and discus throwers Lisa Bee (second in 112-0) and Mike Bowles (third place with 154-2, a lifetime best by a good ten feet) for the trip to the June 6-7 summit meeting in San Diego.

Granada will send five girls to San Diego, the result of an excellent outing at DVC. The Matador 440 relay team dashed 50.6 in nose out of Del Norte for fourth place. Later, anchorwoman Diana Stohr outclassed the field in the open 440, winning in 58.9. Kathy Honour, another relayist, added a 12.0 fourth place finish in the 80-yard low hurdles, and Sheryl Common survived the cut with 37-4 for fourth in the shot put.

Dublin's Frosh-Soph-B 440 relay team closed its season with a decisive 44.1 victory.

Harry Ellis' Dedy Cooper led the Falcons to the NCS team title by winning the 330 low hurdles in 36.0, dusting Robert Gaines with a national record-equaling 13.4 in the 120 hurdles, and anchoring both winning relay teams.

EBAL's year of defense

If it seems like you almost never saw a runner cross home plate during the EBAL baseball season, you are right.

According to statistics released by the league today, the top scoring club in the six-team league was champion Livermore High. And the Cowboys averaged just three runs per contest.

Batting yielded to pitching throughout the EBAL this past year, as evidenced by the team batting percentages.

Livermore paced all clubs with a meager .224 average, followed closely by San Ramon at .223.

Livermore shortstop Wayne Perry won the batting title with a hefty .383 average, but after that, the numbers fall off. Tim Duke of Granada was second at .308, and Carl Speck, San Ramon, third with a .300 mark.

San Ramon's Greg Bishop batted a robust .400 in the EBAL season, but had fell three plate appearances short of qualifying for the championship.

Pitching dominated the EBAL this year, and two players dominated the pitching statistics. They were Keith Richardson of Livermore, and Monte Vista's Chris Dudley.

Richardson posted a 6-2 league mark, allowing 35 hits in 56 innings of work. He struck out 65 in that span, and walked 18.

Dudley was 5-1 with 30 base hits in 38 innings. He walked only 10.

Ridgeland's 'study' of doubtful value

Before there is a great outpouring of public criticism aimed at "Santa Clara County's scuttling of any move to preserve the ridgeland for permanent open space," perhaps an attempt to understand the reasoning behind that county's move might be in order.

In summing up the vote by the Santa Clara board of supervisors not to go along with the Alameda County push for such a "study," one member of that neighboring panel noted that "a study suggests we would be looking for alternatives — and we're not." There can be little doubt that the emphasis behind the "Preserve Area Ridgeland Committee" (PARC) movement has been to convert vast tracts of private land to public use. This might be a commendable goal, if we can afford it.

The Santa Clara County board seems to believe that such a move is not economically feasible, and perhaps not even logical. "The land is already being put to good use," was the response of one anti-PARC person who maintains that cattle ranching is a historic and valid use of those ridge tops, and one well worth preserving.

This newspaper has always maintained that a more intelligent working relationship involving ranchers and "the public benefit" is needed. There is no way these counties, even with massive doses of federal money, can buy up the thousands upon thousands of acres which stretch along the high country from Oakland to Sunol, and thence east and south into San Joaquin and Santa Clara counties. It is tragically clear that even the few thousand acres already held by the East Bay Regional Park District is almost beyond that two-county district's ability to maintain, at least for the average family's use.

The emotion which suggests all private land ownership is bad, and the only "open space" is that which is held by some bureaucracy, is not even good socialism. The ridges and foothills which abound in this one valley are a joy to the 100,000 of us flatlanders who wish only to gaze upon that forested vista in order to gain full "public enjoyment." Most of us do not need to to tramp across every last acre, driving owners and cattle out, in order to achieve such pleasure. The view is enough.

Our federal and regional park boosters would serve us better if they sought legislation that would enable the cattle rancher to continue in business, perhaps with limited access for equestrian and hiking groups. Flamboyant campaigns and expensive "studies" that have little promise of real accomplishment — at least not in this century — can be very rewarding to the heroes in charge; but when they fail to serve the public, and threaten even the "open space" use that has prevailed for a century or more, then it is time the rest of us started asking questions.

We suspect that is just what the Santa Clara County supervisors were doing, when they declined to go along with yet another "study to preserve the ridgeland."

and sizeable employer of "new career people" has always been impressed with the potential of the community college program. Chabot has never given us reason to be disappointed.

There is a great deal more to a college career than the immediate promise of a job. But for hundreds, perhaps thousands of area young people, housewives and "displaced breadwinners," the need to identify with today's job market is important, even critical. The community college system has the in-town flexibility to adjust to that changing market. It is a virtue that the larger university complex cannot hope to capture.

Offering college courses that make good sense to people in need is one goal that many critics find wanting in this nation's higher education levels. The community colleges are already there. They must be commended for their foresight, and they should be urged to keep up the good work.

City injustice

Editor, The Times:
Regarding the Jerry Aldrich's home on Second Street, I attended the City Council meeting Tuesday night and if ever there was comedy and some injustice and unwise dismounts would not fall on their Post Toasties and suffer severe injury because the surface was not in proper condition.

Frankly I cannot, nor will I ever, be able to understand the type of mentality which would subject anyone to excessive danger, in a sport which is already fraught with hazards, for the sake of a couple of weeks of soccer which could be played elsewhere.

I am told some seven soccer fields are available to the youth of Livermore for the playing of the game and feel that, with an abundant amount of playing fields a little rescheduling should provide ample time for all games to be completed.

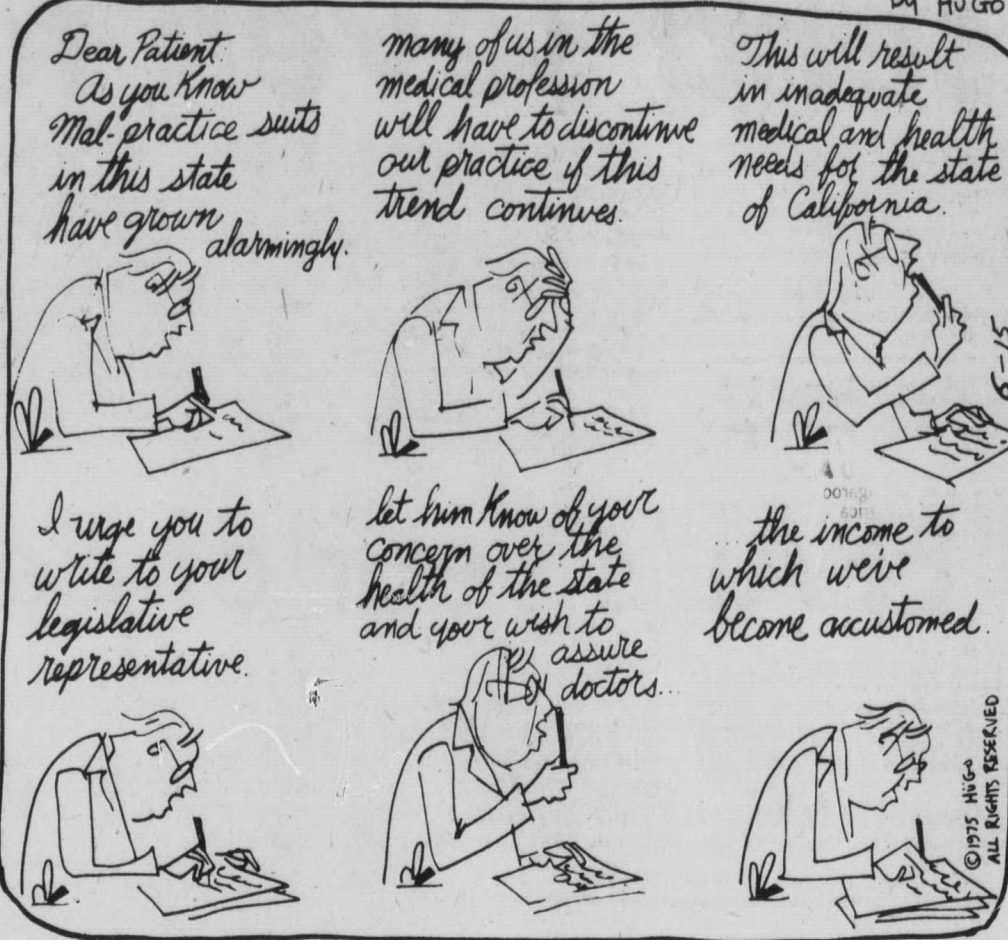

Frankly I do not think it would hurt the lads and lassies who play soccer, nor the men from the rec department who officiate at the games, to rise at the crack of dawn and play a couple of contests when the dew is wet and the sun still low on the horizon.

Believe me, the cowhands you see aboard the bucking broncos and the brahma bulls next Sunday will be familiar with the dawn's early light. That is milking time, my friends, time to saddle old Paint and ride out onto the open range to repair fences and round up stray calves.

There are those who hate rodeo, I suppose, but they are the folks who have never watched and do not understand.

I find something particularly noble about the rodeo cowboys and eventually cowgirls, I hope, — who mount those wild animals and ride them from chute to arena, catching the rhythm of the jumps and the turns, riding high, one hand aloft, while their animal's backs turn rigid as they rise and bend into a near needle pointed V.

Latest schools lifeline?

At least two legislators think they have an answer to putting schools on a solid financial base statewide.

Assemblyman Leroy Greene and Senator Albert Rodda, both Sacramento Democrats, have companion bills in the legislative hopper that would bring California schools into compliance with a court decision to provide equalized funding.

Yet, the two have expressed doubt that the legislature would enact such far-reaching proposals this year, and perhaps not before a court-set deadline. The two legislators refer to the Serrano-Priest court decision which holds that funding public schools primarily on property taxes levied in each district is unfair because it provides unequal school services throughout the state. That decision is now being appealed.

The court dumped the responsibility for reform on the state legislature, and gave them six years to comply.

"The courts try to approach utopia instead of realistic solutions," says Rodda of the court's opinion.

Basically, the bill (AB 720 and its companion, SB 383), would establish a "quality level of support" for each student in the state of $1,120 per pupil at the elementary and $1,293 per student at the high school level. The money to provide this level would be raised by a statewide property tax, estimated to be about $4 per $100 assessed valuation for a unified district...such as Livermore and San Ramon, the only two in the valley.

If a school district wished to provide a higher level of service to students in the district, the voters could approve extra taxes. But, this money would be "power equalized"....the extra money going into a state pool fund, and be distributed not only to the district which raised it, but to other, poorer districts in the state.

Although taxes would go up in many districts to provide the "quality" level, they would go down in low-spending, low-wealth districts, such as those in residential areas with no industry to provide a broader tax base.

Now does that latter description fit Pleasanton, Livermore or Dublin?

The chief of the State Department of Education's governmental relations department says the bills introduced by Rodda and Greene will not only meet the dictates of the Serrano decision, but provide a substantial reform in educating California's children.

John Mockler, the department director, estimates that only 25 per cent of the 1,100 school districts in California now provide the level of support proposed by the Greene and Rodda bills.

These proposals face a rough go in the state legislature this year. First of all, they address the controversial issue of a statewide property tax....and this taxing power has historically been reserved to local government units for raising revenue. Secondly, the proposal's five-year plan would require an infusion of $1.5 billion dollars. Although this is only one-half billion dollars more than what the state would spend if present programs are maintained, some body's taxes will have to go up to pay for it.

Rodda notes that "no legislature wants to vote a big tax increase. So it looks like we're going to have to buy reform by cutting out programming that was funded individually."

Whatever happens, some observers believe that as the court deadline nears, "the pressure will mount, and some kind of effective legislation will come out of the legislature. Mockler says that "We'd like to think it will be close to the proposals made by Greene and Rodda."

Round the town

There was a call from the mother who had "just about lost faith in our public school system." Then there was the Dublin woman who took note of "The Decline and Fall of the United States of America" in order to reaffirm her vision of "our flag flying always over the land of the free and brave."

When the Attorney General of the State of California took pains to remind us all that "victims of violent crimes can qualify for reimbursement of up to $10,000 for medical expenses, $10,000 for lost wages, and $3000 in job-oriented rehabilitation," I had just about concluded that there was a price for everything in this life and I didn't want to pay it.

But then along came the Grammar School Reunion. There is nothing like a spirited conversation with those who have survived almost a century of past travail, in order to rekindle one's faith in the future.

Those of you who could care less about a school long gone, and a standard which now belongs in the story books, are probably getting damned good and tired of this newspaper's coverage of "the original Pleasanton Grammar School." But it is not the past we honor, so much as it is the vitality of those who can still recall that time with such enthusiasm, and make us, in turn, enthusiastic about our time and place.

George Walton will captivate any audience with his vivid recollection of the "grammar school days in Pleasanton, high school in Livermore, and a daily train commute to Oakland for those who could afford a better education." George Walton is the son of the valley's first major home builder, a carpenter in his own right who later turned to medicine. And George Walton, M.D. and mighty delightful, is in his 92nd year on this earth.

John Busch's eyes sparkle with the impishness of youth as he talks about a school "with no lights except that which came through the window... heat from a coal stove... a barn for horses and buggies, and that we pupils had to clean up every day before we could leave for home." And John Busch left Pleasanton Grammar School in 1901, to build a fine life for his family, to till the rich valley soil, and to serve his neighbors and his town as have few others, before or since.

It is not so much what they say, as it is the enthusiasm with which they say it. The warmth of their greeting. The joy that springs from a body which — as Bertha Casterson so beautifully recalled — "is thin of blood, joints swollen, arches fallen, back aching... but still I'm feeling fine."

They were, truly, feeling fine. And because they were good enough to share their enthusiasm with me, just when I needed a boost, I will love them always.

I am not so old that I had to draw water from a well on the school grounds, in order to wash the manure from my hands. But a well was an integral part of our yard at home, and the gaining of a single bucket of fluid could be a genuine triumph — particularly when the temperature dropped below 30 degrees, and the water level dropped below an ice cap, eight feet from the top of that great cavity.

As the youngest of our clan, I was rarely called upon for the heavy task of hauling a full bucket from water level to well's top. But when the blessed thing froze over, it was my small size — and, I expect, an older brother's view of my expendability — which made me ideal for lowering down the shaft.

"Don't drop him," my poor mother would plead. "If I do it would at least break the bloody ice cap," big brother would reply. But even that triumph was questionable: given the slowness of my build, and the thickness of that ice.

It served also as our freezer. Butter and milk and eggs, lowered into the well would keep forever, or almost. The secret was to choose just the right depth, depending on the degree of refrigeration desired. Four bottles of separated milk, lowered too far down the well's frozen depths, would result in the cream popping out of the top of the bottle like a great yellow stick. Fresh eggs, frozen to the yoke, would refuse to do their thing in the frying pan.

Our very first "kitchen appliance" was an ice box. With this marvel of technological advance, we were able to store fresh dairy products and produce right inside the house! Almost forever, as long as the ice man, cameth. The only problem was making certain the drain pan beneath the ice box was emptied, frequently.

"The damned ice pan overflowed all over the kitchen floor again," was a declaration heard often from the first family member to enter the house at day's end. "It should be his responsibility for emptying it... after all, he's the youngest." I grew up believing that there is perhaps no greater curse than being the last born. A thing to be used for breaking ice in a frozen well, a scapegoat to be associated with every calamity.

I shall hope to have the good grace to find humor in my own "wonderful growing up years," when I am 80-plus, attending the old school reunion.

draws larger crowds than it did in the days of yore, if only because the seating facilities dwarf those of another era.

Yet there are those, I am sure, who would destroy rodeo in Livermore for the sake of a few children's games which could be held elsewhere for the few weeks it takes to get the stadium floor back in shape.

They will not succeed, my friends, if only because there are so many folks in this valley who still hold these United States and its traditions sacred and precious, who come to the stadium on a warm June afternoon and find their hearts as warm as their topsides when they hear the blessed patriotic corn voiced by the announcer while the grand entry is in progress.

They will rise and cheer when the brave men ride their broncos out into the arena, clap for the bullfighters whose only weapons are the painted faces of clowns and a padded barrel.

When the day is over they will have done more than received a rich reward for the fee of admission, they will have helped preserve a wonderful page of American history and enjoyed themselves in so doing.

For those who cannot understand how precious rodeo is to Livermore, I feel only sympathy and compassion. I feel anger and emotion quicker than most and I am grateful that I do.

Better than being born with an equation where my brain belongs, a computer for a heart, the ability to extrapolate where my sense of humor lives and only a round ball with which to find amusement.

The road to pleasure winds through pain and believe me the rodeo riders know the route.

Sound and Fury

One week more and it will all be over by nightfall of June 8. The planning and the preparation, the months of work by Joe Serpa — the rancher and his son — and their buddies who make the Livermore Rodeo possible.

They have been having trouble of late. Folks from far away Iowa Indiana and other unlikely points do not quite understand why a rodeo should disrupt — if it does — the Livermore soccer program and are throwing roadblocks in front of the cowhands who ride the horses and rope the steers for the faithful during the annual performance.

Last week it took a court order from one M. O. Sabraw, judge of the superior court in Hayward, to force the Livermore Area Recreation and Park District to properly prepare the grounds so that riders and their ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be extra-careful who you take into your confidence today. Don't disclose information to one known to talk too freely.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll receive strong feelings from a friend who wants to borrow something. Follow your instincts, to avoid being taken.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The ends do not justify the means for you today. Don't do anything that could sacrifice your good name for a temporary gain.
